The Duel

The ballroom . . . intoxicating music . . . a captivating woman in his arms . . . exhilaration . . . passion . . . romance . . . a kiss interrupted . . . an abrupt stop . . . an angry man . . . jealous accusations . . . tears. The music stopped, the dancing stopped and everyone stared. A slap in the face . . . a challenge for restitution of honor . . . a duel at dawn.

Thanks to the generous donations for music licensing by Jean Noah and Dr. Cynthia Sistik-Chandler, the new story “The Duel” is now available on the s2m website. Enjoy!

Adopt-a-Story!

If you like listening to free stories2music, help bring new stories to life by adopting a new story. You can be a story’s full sponsor or be a co-sponsor with others. Sponsors donate funds to pay for music licensing fees for their adopted stories.

Two New Blog Posts

As I produced more stories, I became more aware of the music grammar—what the music was actually saying. My ear became more educated, and I began to hear areas where the music didn’t quite match the words so perfectly. Learn more about my discoveries in my new blog post: Can Music Guide a Story?

By now, it should be clear that stories2music audio stories would not be what they are without the film music. It is an integral part of the storytelling. But where did the music come from? Read about this amazing journey of discovery in my new blog post: Where’s the Music?
