“The Plea” Radio Drama

“Audio drama is having an art renaissance” says KC Wayland. “The ease of access to the technology and the distribution platform of podcasts is turning up the volume on this form of aural entertainment.” According to TheaterCrafts.com, “a radio drama depends on dialogue, music and sound effects to help the listener imagine the characters and story.”

For my final projects in my Broadcast and Media Writing class at Palomar College this semester, I am expanding the s2m story “The Plea” into an Edwardian mystery radio drama. Set in 1902 England, Dr. Alexander goes missing after a midnight visitation from a mysterious woman on a white horse. The doctor’s hidden journal has the key, but will his brother find it in time to rescue him?

Meanwhile, you can listen to “The Plea” story on the s2m listen page.

New Story

“The Golden Hour” has finished production and is now awaiting funding for music licensing. Gorgeous music by Simon Arthur Rhodes fills this story with romance and beauty.
